The questions below will identify if your businesses is in a position to benefit from these.

- Do you have large investments in cash and require an investment that will consistently exceed cash returns in the long run?

- Do you require the accumulation of capital to fund future expenditure for example machinery replacement, infrastructural developments, rehabilitation projects, farming, fleet vehicles, etc.?
- Is your business liable for corporate tax?
- Does your business foresee tax deductible expenses in the future?

If you answered yes to one or more of the questions above then your business could benefit from investing in the Capital Bond.

Benefits of investing in the Capital Bond

Investment Returns

Most businesses choose to keep their excess capital in flexible and liquid investments such as cash and cash equivalents. Our range of investment funds have mandates to exceed cash returns by a significant margin.

The Capital Bond also provides a more tax efficient investment vehicle relative to investing in cash.

Investment expertise

The Capital Bond offers a pooled proposition that gives businesses affordable access to a Fund Manager with exposure to their investment expertise and a large selection of assets to invest in from relatively small contributions.

Tax benefits in year of investment

The amount invested into the Capital Bond can be deducted from your business' income for tax purposes during the year of incurral. So your business will have a tax saving in the year of investment based on its prevailing tax rate and the contribution it makes to the Capital Bond.

Tax benefits during investment period

Tax on the investment returns earned while invested in the Capital Bond are deducted at the tax rate applicable to Liberty Life Namibia as an insurance company as opposed to your business' tax rate.

Tax benefits on withdrawal of investment

On withdrawal of funds, the withdrawn amount including proceeds earned will be subject to tax as per your business' tax rate. If however you foresee tax deductible expenses to be incurred by your business in future, your business may deduct these expenses from the proceeds on withdrawal of amounts from the Capital Bond for tax purposes if these occur in the same financial year. For example, if you require new machinery for your business at a point in the future then this expense can be offset against the withdrawal of monies from your Capital Bond for tax purposes.
